Looking for data?

- Visit the DRC.
- Are you trying to track down a specific data set and you can't seem to find it? The Library can help!
- Book an appointment with Data Resource Centre (DRC) staff. Email drchelp@uoguelph.ca with details regarding the data or help you need.

Citation and Reference Styles

- Get more information about Citing Your Sources in the guide.
- More citing information here.
- Get writing help here.

How to “use” the sources?

- How to Read an Article (Video)
- How to Read a Book (Video)
- How to use Evidence Effectively
- Using Quotations in your essay
- Paraphrasing the information

Organizing Your Information

- You might want to try concept mapping to help organize your thoughts.
- There are online citation tools to manage your sources.
- There are other places online you might want to organize and store your files: Dropbox, Google Drive, Evernote
  - Try organizing by assignment, using folders to group by class, then by assignment can be helpful.

Not sure about a source? Where can you go for help?

- Use CRAAP to test whether or not you should use a source.
- UC: Berkeley has a great page that helps you go through the details of a website.
- Ask Us at the library.
- If you’ve used the CRAAP criteria and the UC Berkeley page and still have questions, talk to your instructor.
